

VOLUME XLIV --- NUMBER 4.

Whig and Courier

This is an outline of the story. Its details will be described by eye witnesses under oath.

THE CAMPAIGN OF ASSASSINATION

Senator Gordon telegraphed to the President that not a drop of blood had been shed in the late exciting campaign except by the partisans of Chamberlain. Gen. Hampton signed the same telegram. Yet these two massacres had not leaved the soil of South Carolina with a human blood" and at the time that Gordon and Hampton put their names to the sp it h

The Republican says that the house of David R. Brown of Michigan is badly injured by the loss of his property.
The surviving party on the shore line were withdrawn on Saturday 23d ult. and reached Whiteville on that day. The severe winter and deep snow render it impossible to travel in that location further East this winter with economy.

State at Large
The Press says that last Wednesday evening a party of four persons, viz. Charles S. Townsley, Mrs E. E. Townsley, her daughter, Mrs. Emma Coffin and Mr. James A. Thompson of Oakland, California, and Mr. Alfred H. Giley of Crater, before he left the residence of Capt. W. H. Peble in Portland, where they had been visiting, and took the Boston boat, and were on the unfortunate train on Friday. Mrs. Trueworthy had four ribs broken, while Mrs. Trueworthy, Mrs. Coffin and Mr. Giley were killed. The remains of the latter have not yet been recognized. Mr. Thompson and a married daughter Mr. Peble's wife was not seriously injured.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The session of the Maine Legislature, as shown by our special despatch, organized yesterday by the choice of General Thomas W. Hyde, of Bath, as President of the Senate, and Edward B. Nealley, of our own city, Speaker of the House, and is now in full working order for the transaction of the business which may be brought before it. The canvass for the Speakership was conducted with the best of feeling and the result is cordially accepted on all sides, and we predict will prove entirely satisfactory to the House itself as well as to the friends of Mr. Nealley, who advocated his selection for the position. The other officers of the Senate and House have been well chosen by the two bodies and will ably fill the positions to which they have been called. The Legislature of 1877 is a fine body of men, and with the organization formed will conduct the legislation of the year in that same straightforward, careful manner which has ever been the pride of the people, and conducive to the well being of the whole State.

The nominations for State officers made last evening are good ones, as a perusal of the list given in another column will show, especially that of Mr. Banks for State Treasurer, which office Mr. Hatch retires from with so much credit, and will give excellent satisfaction to the people. Both candidates were eminently worthy and the selection of either of the gentlemen would have been accepted with the utmost cordiality.

The Senatorial canvass will be held this Thursday evening and our advice are that the universal desire by the Republicans of the Legislature is to tender the nomination to Mr. Blaine in the most complimentary manner and indicate that the bestowment of the Senatorship on Maine's distinguished statesman, as his ability and faithful service to the cause of the State and Nation so amply deserve.

TILDEN AND ROBINSON.

Mr. Tilden and Robinson yesterday organized themselves into a mutual admiration society and held a brief, but brilliant session in the Assembly Chamber. Mr. Tilden assured Mr. Robinson that it was a great compliment to be called to fill his (Tilden's) place, and hinted that he had been chosen because Mr. Robinson had occupied a subordinate place in the Governor's chair. He then proceeded, in an amiable manner to show that so much had been done and it had been so well done, that there was very little room for the exercise of even Mr. Robinson's great abilities. Mr. Tilden passed for the thousandth time the modern Hercules, and repeated his achievements, with assurance that would have been the despair of the Greek brigand, damaged though he was. He told Mr. Robinson how he (with Mr. Robinson, but mostly he) had reduced taxes and improved institutions and laws, and systematically called into the civil service, "whether by appointment or election," men of "high ability," and so on to the end of the old story. One would suppose to read his rhodomontade that there had been no Legislature in existence for the last two years, and that Mr. Tilden, not the people, had named the Constitution and chosen the officers of the State.

This elaborate boasting, of course, had, like all of Mr. Tilden's recent public acts, a purpose with reference to the attainment of the Presidency. To win the favor of former still clinging to the memory of a former President, Mr. Tilden takes occasion to repeat forever from public life, to parade his fancied superiority over the rest of the world in hopes of fanning the weary energies of his supporters at the national capital in their effort to grasp the prize which the law demands. But it is too late. The sober sense of the people has not been deceived by his supply of puerile and his persistent attempts to steal the credit which I long ago gave to Mr. Tilden, who occupies at present a position quite as conspicuous, but by no means as honorable, as he imagined. The greatest calamity that can befall a man of his stamp has happened to him—he has been found out. He is to-day the representative, not of a great nation, but of a great nation's folly. He is to-day the representative, not of a great nation, but of a great nation's folly. He is to-day the representative, not of a great nation, but of a great nation's folly.

The Democratic wing of the Congressional Committee now investigating the Louisiana election every now and then run against a very ugly stump in the form of a witness who has not been properly coached, and consequently tells the truth. One of this class was yesterday the other day, and astonished Mr. Morrison and his associates by producing the following extract from a Democratic newspaper printed in Morehouse county:

"The Radicals are making desperate efforts to organize in the parish. Democrats, now is the time to make your desperate struggle. Give every meeting they attempt to hold, a break. Break every night meeting. Do not let them have a single one secretly, and you will soon strangle the life out of Radicalism in Morehouse."

This advice of a Democratic paper, speaking for the Democratic managers, is the best kind of evidence of the purpose of those leaders to carry the election in any event. The testimony given by the Senate Committee fully establishes the fact that the programme was carried out. Republican meetings were broken up, armed bands of White Liners rode throughout the country threatening the negroes, and in many instances killing, wounding or whipping them, prominent white Republicans were ordered to leave the county; a reign of terror existed in which no Republican was secure in life or property. The fact that the advice of the Morehouse Gazette, given above, was heeded, is further proved by the vote of that county. In 1872 the vote in the county was 1084 for Gen. Grant, 673 for Mr. Greeley. In 1874 the Republican majority was 528. The county is naturally Republican in the ratio of 10 to 6. The overturn resulted from the Curran policy. And yet there are thousands of Democrats who will fly into a passion if one mildly suggests that there was not a fair and free election in Louisiana.

Gov. Vance, the most bitter and, consequently, the most Governor in persecuting Union men, was Monday inaugurated Governor of North Carolina, and Strauss at the "Jubilee," owed something to his reputation for the support of the great composer. "Yes," much was owing to his brightness; the contents of "Gems of the Dance" are bright enough for anyone. They are divided into "dances," "dances," "dances," etc., etc. The two Strauss's, and the rest are by George, Zakoff, Lantano, Faust and others. In all there are about 25 authors, whose compositions fill 232 large pages. For sale at Duren's.
